National Primary Care Pathway for Constipation in Children

Video Introduction and overview to constipation in children | YouTube

The National Primary Care Clinical Pathway for Constipation in Children gives advice to clinicians on how to prevent and manage constipation in children and young people. This is done in a clear and standardised approach, based on guidelines from the National Institute for Health and Care Excellence (NICE), the British National Formulary for Children (BNFc) and clinical expert groups.

The pathway makes sure that clinicians, families and other care providers can easily access available resources. It also raises the profile of constipation in children and young people with a learning disability as a factor in adult mortality rates.
